ABOUT

Scott joined McCollum Crowley in 2009 after completing his law school studies at Hamline University. He is a '96 graduate of Gustavus Adolphus College where he majored in Criminal Justice and Political Science. After Gustavus, Scott attended Michigan State University and obtained a Master's Degree in Social Sciences - Criminal Justice. After spending some time working in the criminal justice field, Scott—like most insurance professionals—somehow found his calling in the insurance field.

In the late '90s, Scott began working as a Workers' Compensation Claims Examiner for Wausau Insurance Companies. Since then, he has also worked for Westfield Insurance Group and Risk Administration Services. Scott feels his ten years of experience as a workers' compensation adjuster allows him to connect with his clients on a level other attorneys cannot; he can certainly relate to the stresses and pressures of workers' compensation claims adjusting and the many obstacles—both internally and externally—that need to be overcome. As an attorney, he enjoys problem solving with his clients and finding cost-effective solutions that best meet his clients' needs.
